SUBJECT: Revised Management Classification Plan

This memorandum presents a revised management Classification Plan for the Sacramento Housing and Redevelopment Agency which is consistent with your desire to create a classification system which encourages lateral as well as upward mobility and is easily maintained. Under separate cover, as Appendix "A" we have included an overall strategy which establishes the policy framework from which this revised classification plan is designed.

More specifically, this document outlines the following:

- Assumptions
- Career ladders
- Summary of proposed changes
- Class allocations

ASSUMPTIONS

The revised classification structure, as presented, reflects a variety of assumptions. These assumptions include the following:

FLEXIBILITY - The proposed classification structure has been designed to enhance the Agency's flexibility in assigning staff and responding to the continuing redefinition of the Agency's program areas.

SIMPLICITY - The revised classification plan represents a more simplified classification structure. In simplifying the classification system we have created several broad classes of Program Managers and eliminated one level within the management class structure. This change results in a clearer definition of the lines of responsibility and authority inherent in each of the management classes.

CAREER MOBILITY - This plan identifies broad career ladders which provides the Agency with clear direction for short and long range human resource planning. While the proposed career ladders emphasize upward movement, employees are encouraged to use a variety of lateral movements within the Agency in order to broaden their professional growth and development.

RESOLUTION 89-108
DEC 12 1989 (27)

CAREER LADDERS

One of the principal objectives of a classification study is to identify career ladders. Career ladders improve the ability of an employer to manage its human resources and permit the upward mobility of employees. As a result of this study, a career ladder has been identified and is depicted graphically in this section.

The career ladders presented in this chapter introduce the proposed classification plan. In showing career ladders, job classes are grouped into job "families" and are not necessarily listed on an individual department basis.

Career ladders are portrayed for the following job families:

Administration
Personnel
Legal
Community Development
Housing

CAREER LADDER IDENTIFICATION

Career ladders or paths are defined as objective descriptions of possible sequential work experiences within an organization. These ladders are based on organizational needs and objectives. Progress through any particular career path is determined by the employee's effort, growth, and individual goals as well as the organization's philosophy toward career development. It is the mutual participation and cooperation of employee and organization that determines the success of any career development program.

The proposed career ladders show only upward movement. Employees should also, however, be encouraged to use a variety of lateral movements within the Agency. Lateral moves will broaden an employee's experience base, and overall knowledge of and familiarity with the Agency. These lateral paths have not been indicated in this manual because the only limit to the number of possible lateral moves is determined by the employee's capabilities and the Agency's needs.

CAREER LADDER IMPLEMENTATION

The development and support of relevant career ladders provides many useful benefits to the Agency and its employees. It encourages the growth and retention of "quality" employees. It assists the Agency in meeting the goals of its Affirmative Action programs and ensures the success of internal promotion policies and practices. The establishment and use of career ladders provides direction for short and long-range human resource planning. The size and sophistication of any career development program depends on the size of the organization, the number of job classes, the number of administrative, technical, and operational divisions, and the number of supervisory and management levels. In general, the larger the organization, the more detailed, complete and innovative its career development programs.

In establishing a career planning system, general guidelines to follow include the following:

1. Establish career ladders.
2. Provide relevant feedback to employees on performance.
3. Foster realistic expectations regarding future opportunities within the Agency.

RESOLUTION 89-108

DEC 12 1989 (28)

4. Match the jobs to the employee, i.e., skills, knowledge, goals, etc.
5. Maintain the program's continuity and flexibility to ensure that the Agency's needs and priorities are met at all times.
6. Integrate career planning with other human resource functions.

It must be emphasized that career development programs and career ladders are never to be used to "compromise" a classification's employment standards. Career development programs and career ladders are to be used to ensure that the most qualified individual available is selected for a particular job. This is accomplished by establishing a systematic promotional sequence through career ladders. This will communicate the selection criteria and standards, and assist employees in developing the knowledge, ability and skills to meet them. This, in turn, will enhance the quality of human resources available.

SUMMARY OF PROPOSED CHANGES

In summary, the following changes to the Agency's classification plan are proposed:

NEW, REDEFINED, AND DELETED CLASSES

Twenty-nine classes have been redefined or added to replace deleted classes, acknowledge current responsibilities of individual positions, improve internal equity and/or provide the Agency with additional flexibility. In summary, each of the classes replace existing ones. The classes are listed on Exhibit A along with those they replace, where appropriate.

INTRODUCTION

A critical link in the Sacramento Housing and Redevelopment Agency's human resource management system is a specific strategy that insures that the management classification and compensation plan supports the overall mission, objectives, values, and economic resources of the Agency. It is this strategy that will provide the consultants with the necessary policy guidance to develop a management classification and compensation plan that meets the Agency's needs and can be implemented. It will also provide a policy framework within which the Agency can update the management classification and compensation plan in future years.

In this regard, the consultants in cooperation with the Agency's Executive Director have developed a specific classification and compensation strategy that addresses the following issues:

The refinement and confirmation of assumptions regarding the Agency's mission, political environment, culture, economics and legal constraints.

The characteristics of the ideal classification and compensation plan.

Definition of an appropriate labor market and the Agency's preferred relationship to that market.

Relative importance of internal relationships and the market pricing of jobs.

Appropriate salary differentials within career series and between superiors and subordinates.

Relationship of pay to performance.

Appropriate mix of base salary and benefits.

ASSUMPTIONS ABOUT THE ORGANIZATION

A key consideration in developing the Agency's management compensation program are the constraints or limiting factors that establish the parameters within which the program must be developed. These include the following:

Mission. The fundamental mission of the Agency is to provide an extremely complex and sophisticated range of services to a diverse urban population. Specific features of this service environment include:

Commitment to customer service.

Recognition that the Agency provides both mandated and discretionary public services. With respect to mandated services, especially low income housing the Agency is often the key catalyst to identifying low income housing opportunities.

Commitment to quality of life.

Commitment to efficiency, effectiveness, and public accountability.

Political Environment. Like most urban communities, Sacramento's political environment is characterized by change, flux and increased pressure for more services. On a positive note the environment is healthy and positive and is characterized by:

- An interest in strategic planning and a progressive and future oriented organization.
- A commitment to creative problem solving, automation and productivity enhancements.
- A commitment to social issues.
- Sensitivity over salaries and concern for management as well as rank and file employees.

Organization Culture. The Agency's organizational culture is characterized as:

- Good government environment with a commitment to open, careful, consideration of decisions.
- Relatively stable and conservative with a moderate tolerance for risk taking and the potential for failure. Creativity is somewhat encouraged.
- Healthy and friendly place to work.

Economics. On a relative basis, the Sacramento area is in better economic condition than other California communities and the Agency's economic future is characterized by:

- A potentially rapid, but measured level of economic growth.
- High dependence on Federal dollars and tax increment revenues.
- Limited discretion on spending, especially with respect to federally subsidized programs.
- Increased competition for limited dollars. As a consequence, the Commission is required to make very difficult spending decisions.

Legal. The Agency's legal structure includes some of the features:

- A joint City/County special purpose government which permits the Executive Director to centrally manage activities and initiate change.
- Direct responsibility to the Sacramento Housing and Redevelopment Commission which is comprised of persons appointed by the Sacramento City Council and the Sacramento County Board of Supervisors.

IDEAL MANAGEMENT CLASSIFICATION AND COMPENSATION PLAN

In consideration of the above organizational factors, an ideal management classification and compensation plan would include the following features:

Classification. The classification plan should be characterized by:

An overall system that is logical and predictable.

Appropriate blend of broad and specialized classes.

Development of career ladders and a commitment to upward as well as lateral career mobility designed to encourage employee development.

Flexibility.

Accurate class specifications and relevant job titles.

Ability to recruit for specialists through the use of working titles.

Utility to operating departments.

Ease of maintenance.

Management and budget review of all reclassification requests to insure that the integrity of the system is maintained.

Compensation. The compensation plan would be characterized by:

Fairness

Flexibility

Ease of administration

Ability to recruit and retain top quality people

Affordability

Market pricing of the pay structure. Internal alignments will be considered within career groups and across related career groups.

LABOR MARKET AND COMPETITIVE POSITION

In overall terms, the Agency's labor market should focus on the City and County of Sacramento.

The Agency's preferred competitive position should be based on total compensation of the City and County and should take into account the difficulties in the recruitment and retention of management staff.

MARKET PRICING AND INTERNAL RELATIONSHIPS

In overall terms, the Agency's management salary structure will be developed in accordance with the following guidelines:

To the maximum extent possible salary levels will be tied directly to comparable positions in the City/County market.

Appropriate salary differentials will be maintained within career series and between superiors and subordinates.

Classes in related career series will be tied internally for salary purposes where comparable positions in the City/County market are not readily identifiable.

PAY ADMINISTRATION PRINCIPLES

As a general principle, the compensation structure of the Agency's managers should be tied to the local labor market while also related to performance. Given the Agency's organizational environment such a system should:

Encourage innovation but not undue risk.

Recognize the relationship of the management pay structure to the non-management pay structure e.g. salary compaction, cost of living increases.

Be affordable.

The Agency's organizational culture is currently in transition with the recent hiring of a new Executive Director. Nevertheless, the Agency is committed to strategic planning and a progressive and future oriented organization.

MIX OF BASE SALARY AND BENEFITS

In overall terms, the base salary and benefit program should be:

Generally competitive in the market. It should not over emphasize either base salary or benefits.

Flexible - permit employees to shift the mix ^{of} cash and benefits to meet individual needs.
